World Education Leadership Symposium September 25 – 27 in Zug, Switzerland

2019

Plenary Program: Responsible Leadership – Demands, Reality, Possibilities

The responsibility for the education of children and youth is rooted in ethically-reflected thinking and actions based on moral values of society and professional attributes and attitudes (ie. a value-based professional ethos). Professionalism includes the use of comprehensive knowledge bases and continuous development of competences.

ambiguity and affinity to dealing with complexity as well as strategic and systematic actions. The responsibility to develop 'next practice' (aiming towards 'best practice') requires sustaining good practice, optimising established practices and innovating new practice. This responsibility lies on different actors in all education institutions on all different levels in the education system and needs mutual collaboration.

Being responsible for education comprises dealing with various and sometimes contradicting demands, needs and aspirations and various contextual conditions which influence on feasibilities and options of realisation. Responsible leadership includes differentiated analysis, tolerance of Central topics include e.g.: responsible leadership, innovation, sustainability, communities of practice, networking, challenges and international trends in current policy and practice, education 5.0.
